Aspiring songwriter learns music

Elektra Thompson, who will be in fourth grade this fall, hopes to be a songwriter. She sometimes writes lyrics, and she began taking guitar lessons so she could learn music.

Thompson's family bought her a pink acoustic guitar at Garten's Music, and she now owns a purple Daisy Rock guitar. Garten's, home of the Wichita Music Academy, recently started carrying Daisy Rock instruments. The company was founded by guitarist and bass player Tish Ciravolo, who wanted the guitar world to be more welcoming for girls. The Daisy Rock line features guitars in various colors and patterns that are lighter weight with slimmer necks, so they are easier for girls to hold.

Thompson said she enjoyed playing guitar.

"I can make noise with the guitar," she explained, "and it's easy to carry around."

Thompson added that listening to music sparked her desire to take lessons. Country music is her favorite.

"I like that I'm learning," she remarked.

Thompson studies with Wichita Music Academy instructor Les Clark, who said she always arrived for her lessons with a smile and a good attitude.

"Elektra is super-excited all the time and always wanting to learn something new," Clark said.

Thompson also complimented Clark.

“I like him,” she said. “He’s just nice.”

When she’s not playing guitar, Thompson likes to color and spend time with her dogs – a dachshund named Rusty and a boxer named Spot. According to Thompson, their nicknames are Barker and Whiner.

Thompson said her advice to others considering music lessons was “to at least try it.”

Longtime pianist enjoys teaching

► Instructor starts job at Wichita Music Academy

Joy Vigilus is new to Kansas and to the Wichita Music Academy at Garten's Music, but she is delighted with her slate of piano students.

"I've really enjoyed all the students I've had so far," she said. "It's such a warm, friendly environment here. Students are excited to be here and to be learning. It's very cool."

Vigilus grew up in Washington, D.C. Her mother played the piano, and her two older brothers took piano lessons.

"I was always the kid that wanted to do whatever they were doing," she said.

Vigilus began learning to play the piano when she was 4. She played for church services and accompanied her church choir when she was in high school. After studying political philosophy for two years in college, she switched to a music emphasis "and just fell in love with it all over again," she recalled.

She received her first teaching job during college, when she worked at a Virginia music and arts school that offered lessons. She earned her bachelor of arts in music.

Piano teacher Joy Vigilus moved from Minnesota to Kansas.

Vigilus married and moved to Minnesota, where her husband entered law school. She worked at a music academy and also a piano school there. The couple relocated to Kansas because her husband is from Wichita.

Vigilus likes teaching her students about how to play and become better musicians, but she loves other aspects of the profession, too.

"I love that it's not only about music," she said. "Music challenges a musician on more levels than just playing. It helps us grow as people."

Vigilus also pointed out that if students were having a bad day, they arrived and discussed music and soon felt better.

"I feel like I'm doing something meaningful," she added. "It's fulfilling."

Vigilus likes listening to classical music, The Beatles and indie musicians. She spends time playing church music and recently took up jazz "to get out of my comfort zone."

"I tell my students to do that," she remarked, "so I need to do it, too."

Wichita Music Academy students receive a $20 gift certificate for every new student they refer to the academy! $$
