Uke student embraces creativity

Grace Francis used to play the piano, but she has fallen in love with the ukulele. She has some advice for aspiring musicians.

“Pick an instrument that really reflects you and your characteristics and what you really like,” she said.

Francis, 9, takes ukulele lessons through the Wichita Music Academy at Garten's Music. She has been a student for almost a year and a half.

“I thought it would be fun to get a uke,” she said. “I got it for Christmas and my dad signed me up for lessons. That's the only stringed instrument that would fit me. Guitar's too big. And I also really like stringed instruments.”

Longtime bass player joins WMA

Jim Keefer is a familiar name to musicians and fans alike in the Wichita area.

He plays in six bands, and he has released two CDs. He has performed at various events such as the Wichita River Festival and Wichita Blues Crawl, and now he has joined the Wichita Music Academy at Garten's Music.

Keefer teaches bass guitar and upright bass. He has been a freelance bassist for 50 years, and he has taught students for 10 years.

“I am excited and eager to bring my love and enthusiasm for playing the bass to a new, young group of future bassists,” he said.

Keefer started his musical journey playing trombone, euphonium and tuba. He began playing upright bass when he was 14. He gravitated toward the music of jazz legends Miles Davis and Dave Brubeck.

Keefer served in the U.S. Army in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when he learned to play the Fender electric bass. He worked with Randy Goodrum, a well-known songwriter, in a group called Jazz Disciples. Keefer also played for many official events, including the Dean Martin "Golddiggers Revue" with comedian Alan King.

Keefer performs in the bands Crosstown Traffic, Nouveau Quintette, Delano Jazz Orchestra, The Boomers, Jim Vega Band and the Keefer Madness blues band. He also plays for church worship services.

"There can never be too many bass players!" he said.

Francis studies with Matt Kuzma, and they performed at the student concert in the spring. They played a duet titled "Grace's Song."

"I made up the chords and he helped me a bit on the melody," Francis said.

"Grace is really enthusiastic about playing the ukulele," said Kuzma. "She is fun to work with because she plays a lot between lessons and wants to learn to play more challenging pieces.

"Grace has a lot of energy around creating her own songs as well as exploring new rhythmic interpretations of existing tunes," he added.

Francis likes classical music, but she's willing to work on any song.

"Even if I don't know it, I'll learn it," she remarked.
